

HARMFUL PLANT SPECIES SPOTTED

Two potentially harmful plant species have recently been observed on the Estate: Nerium Oleander and Fire Sticks, also known as "Fire Stick Succulents". Until recently, many people were unaware of the toxicity of these plants, despite their increased availability as unique house and garden plants.

Oleander Plant

The Estate's Environmental Team has confirmed that these plant species contain poisonous properties that are harmful to humans and animals. Broken stems emit a toxic, milky sap that can require emergency medical care if it gets in your eyes or on your skin.

Fire Sticks Plant

In order to make an informed decision regarding the removal of these plants from gardens, the Estate's Management Team advises homeowners to conduct their own research and educate themselves on the potential health risks posed by these plant species.

A MESSAGE FROM DRAKENSTEIN MUNICIPALITY

Drakenstein Municipality has recently issued the following notice regarding the quality of our drinking water:

"Drakenstein Municipality reassures residents from the Paarl and Wellington area who may be concerned about the quality of drinking water, that the Municipality's drinking water is safe to drink and complies with SANS241 standards.

We understand that rumours of "unsafe water" and "water that smells" are doing the rounds, but can confirm that there is no need to boil any tap water coming from Drakenstein Municipality.

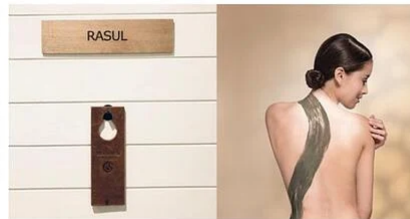

The Municipality receives water from the City of Cape Town's Wemmershoek Dam for our Paarl and Wellington residents. The Wemmershoek Dam is currently being supplemented with water from the Theewaterskloof Dam. This water is being treated by the City of Cape Town at its Wemmershoek treatment works plant; it has different properties to that of the Wemmershoek Dam's water and somewhat of a muddy taste. The treatment process at the Wemmershoek treatment plant was adapted to handle the water from the Theewaterskloof Dam and we understand that the taste will improve within the next few days.

Drakenstein Municipality can assure our residents that all water is being filtered, stabilised and disinfected during the treatment process. Our own Water Services staff also daily monitor the water quality."
